

With a full understanding and agreement with the notion of federal preemption regarding communication regulation, I believe that the NJ "Do Not Call" statute should be considered to be a model of success. If the NJ statute is preempted, that should be done only after the federal statute is tightened so as to mimic the NJ statute. I do business with a lot of people. That does not mean that I give them permission to bother me at future times through telemarketing.

The NJ statute is a success and any action that weakens its effect is a bad thing for its citizens.
